How are you? Jeannie: Oh. Hello, Dan. Pretty good, thank you. Have you managed to raise money for the course yet? Yes, that's all settled, thank you. But it took a long time. Almost a year ago, I applied to the local council for a grant and it took them six months to reject me. That's really slow. And I thought I was entitled to government funding, but I seem to have been wrong. So I asked the boss of the company I worked for if they sponsored me, and to my surprise he said they would contribute (Q21). But what about college grants and scholarships? There must be something you can apply for. Yes, they are, but they're all so small. I've decided to leave them until I'm desperate. JEANNIE: Uhh. And I didn't really join. My parents said since I already have a job, I should make a living in college. But in the end they look compassionate to me, so now I'm just about enough (Q22). That's good. So now I can put a little effort into meeting people - I haven't had time so far. Any suggestions? What about joining the university clubs? Dan: Oh right. You've joined a few, right? Yes, I'm in a drama club. It's our first performance next week, so we're rehearsing feverishly, and I'm late for my job, but it's worth it. I hope to be in spring production. I never liked acting. Is there anything else you're doing? JEANNIE: I liked signing when I was on So I joined the group when I came to college. I don't think the conductor pulls the bus enough (Q23), although so I'll give up after the next concert. And he also joined the debating society. It's fun, but with all the examiners I'm doing, something has to go (Q24), and I'm afraid that's one. Do you do any sports? Yes, I'm on one of the hockey teams. I'm not very good, but I wouldn't be very good, but I'd really miss it if I took a smingle. I decided to try tennis when I came to college, and it's pretty hard for me. I'm just not fit enough. Neither do I. I think I'll let it go! I'm going to do it, it's going to help me build my stamina, but it's probably going to be a long journey. Luck. Jeannie: Thanks. How did you find the course? I wish we had more seminars. What is it? I thought we had more than enough. All those people say smart things that I never think about - it's pretty interesting, but I wonder if I'm smart enough (Q25) to be doing this course. Jeannie: I find it helpful listening to other people. I like the way we are exploring the subject, and working on gaining insight into it. How do you get along with your teacher? I don't think I'm at the same wavelength as me, so I feel like I'm not getting anything from the tutorials. It would be more productive to read a book instead. Mine's very demanding. She gives me a lot of feedback and advice so I got a lot better at writing essays. And it helps me plan a review for end-of-year exams (Q26). You're telling me I'm always struggling with revision. Well, the first thing is to find out exactly what you need in rehearsals. Would it help to get some past papers? Jeannie: Yes. They're going to help them make it clear. All right, I'll do it. And then what? Then you can resolve your review priorities (Q27) based on what is most likely to come. I put them on the card and read them regularly. DAN: Uhh. But that alone is not enough. You also need a timetable (Q28) to see how you fit into everything in the time available. Then keep it in front of you while you study. I've done it before, but it didn't help me! JEANNIE: You may need to do something different every day, so if you divide the revision into small tasks (Q29) and assign them to specific days, there is more motivation to solve them. With big topics, you're more likely to postpone starts. That's a good idea. JEANNIE: And as I revise each topic I write one paragraph (Q30) about it, then I can read it quickly, and it helps to fix things in my mind. That's great. I also write answers to exam questions. It's hard to force yourself into it! Well, I'll give it a shot. Thank you so much, Jeannie. That's a big help. No problem. I'll see you in the shallows. To hate.
